Message from the President

In June the National Committee unanimously voted a two year extension in the terms of our three Executive Officers. I am deeply grateful for the opportunity to continue to serve as President, and I want to thank Vice Presidents Jacquie Scott '90 and Peter Davidson '77 for their continuing involvement with the Association and the rest of the members of the National Committee and all 11 Branch Presidents for their dedication and hard work.

I know alumni will be pleased with the appointment of Matt McBrine '96 as Alumni Relations Coordinator. Matt has brought vigour and enthusiasm to the position, and we are happy to have him on board in a permanent capacity. Our 9,200 alumni will soon be seeing some of Matt's creative energy in a variety of projects, ranging from an improved web site with an upcoming events page to a colourful map tracking alumni worldwide.

The Association will soon be involved with David Rittenhouse of the Dobson-Lagassé Centre for Entrepreneurship to create, in cooperation with the Université de Sherbrooke and major Quebec corporations, a database of present and former students at both schools now living outside Quebec. Those who choose to participate will become part of a web-enabled resource providing advice to entrepreneurs in the region who export to the North American marketplace. We are excited at the prospect of being able to help David in this worthy and ambitious project.

Two Gaiters selected in CFL entry draft

Two Bishop's Gaiters, Andrew Carter and Bill Wright, capped off their university careers by being selected in the Canadian Football League draft. Carter, a 6' 10", 325-pound offensive lineman from Toronto, was picked up by the Calgary Stampeders in the fourth round, 30th overall, while Wright, a 6', 287 pound defensive lineman from Taber, Alta., was selected by the Edmonton Eskimos in the 6th round, 45th overall.

Norman Webster ’62, DCL ’85

2000 Alumnus of the Year

Like a proud parent, Bishop’s University not only rejoices in Norman Webster’s successes but likes to take some credit for them. Editing The Campus, we believe, was a sure-fire way to become editor of Canada’s two top newspapers, and winning the Canadian university debating championship honed his critical skills for his astute political commentaries. We have to admit, however, that Norman seized every opportunity Bishop’s offered and made the most of it.

Under his leadership, The Campus became a member of the Canadian University Press. He was a member of Bishop’s debating team which won the national debating championship two years in a row, and was President of Publications (his nickname was “Better-Late-Than-Never Webster”) on the Students’ Executive Council. When Bishop’s awarded Norman the Golden Mitre in 1962 and saw him go off to Oxford as a Rhodes Scholar, his future looked promising.

Norman lived up to that promise, and then some. Bishop’s awarded him a D.C.L. in 1985 in honour of his achievements in journalism: correspondent in Quebec, Ottawa, London, Peking, Editor-in-chief of The Globe and Mail (1983- 89), winner of two National Newspaper Awards (Canada’s Pulitzer Prize). His distinguished career in journalism carried on as he became Editor-in-chief of The Gazette from 1989-93, then continued to write political columns for Le Devoir (1993-95) and The Gazette (1993-present). Bishop’s was again proud when Norman was named a member of the Order of Canada in 1996.

Although the University would like to claim full responsibility for Norman’s education, we must pay tribute to his parents who taught him that giving back to society could be as important and rewarding as his career in journalism. In 1991, Norman became President of the R. Howard Webster Foundation in Montreal, which donates over $5 million every year to hospitals, universities and charitable institutions across Canada.

Norman offers his experience and expertise on numerous boards, including the Montreal Children’s Hospital Foundation, Green College at University of British Columbia, the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research, the International Press Institute in Vienna and the North-South Institute in Ottawa. He was appointed Chancellor of the University of Prince Edward Island in 1996.

Bishop’s has also been the beneficiary of Norman’s lesson in philanthropy. He has worked hard on behalf of his alma mater as a member of Corporation since 1993 and Chairman of the Executive Committee from 1995-2000. He has responded enthusiastically and generously to financial appeals from the University and has opened his home to allow us to thank our other benefactors. It is with pride and gratitude that Bishop’s names Norman “Alumnus of the Year.”

Gaiter Classic 2001

The 14th Annual 2001 Gaiter Classic Alumni Golf Tournament was a huge success. The tournament, which took place on June 1st, was attended by a record number of 161 golfers and raised over $10,000 for various athletic endowments and the sponsorship of an athletic scholarship of $1,500. Many thanks to all those who participated on this beautiful sunny day and especially the sponsors — without their help the tournament would not be possible. We look forward to a fantastic 15th annual tournament in 2002.

A Message from the President of Corporation

James Ferrabee '57

Erin Leath, Shannon Hodge and Adam Frost are three of the 543 new Bishop's graduates who received their degrees at the June 2 Convocation. They are part of one of the largest graduating classes in Bishop's history.

The three were student leaders, and that is one reason to single them out. Because they were leaders, those of us who sit on the many committees that help run Bishop's got to know them better than other students. We saw them most weeks and certainly once a month for Executive Committee meetings.

They are outstanding young people — personable, articulate, resourceful and fun to be with. In my seven years of involvement at Bishop's, Erin, Shannon and Adam stand out. They spoke out and spoke up for students. On the Executive and other committees, they got the answers they were seeking and changed policies to make Bishop's a better place for students. They are fine examples of why the input from students is so important to the governing of Bishop's.

Erin Leath comes from Virginia, one of the 100 or so U.S. students attending Bishop's. She never regretted her choice. She received a B.Sc. degree, majoring in both Psychology and Biology, also taking a Neuroscience option. Shannon Hodge lives just outside Montreal. She received a B.A. degree with honors in History and a minor in Classical Studies. They were so dedicated to their roles as student reps that they rented a car to drive to Montreal one snowy day last spring for an Executive Committee meeting. Returning to Bishop's, the car slid off the icy road. Happily, neither was hurt.

Adam was the President of the Students' Representative Council in 2000-01. He jokes that he is only a farm boy from Woodstock, New Brunswick, but, whether it was the fertile soil of New Brunswick or the atmosphere at the school he came from, he knows a lot about leadership.

He is a humanist and, typical of Adam, he delved into many corners of the Humanities Division as his B.A. degree shows — English honors, with History and Religion minors.

At Convocation, Adam won the Jeff Cannon Memorial Award, given by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Cannon in memory of their son, an all-round student at Bishop's. Ed Cannon said the award is given to a student who best exemplifies Jeff Cannon's attributes — entrepreneurship, hard work, friendship, a positive attitude and involvement in both the academic and student life at Bishop's as well as participation in the community life in Sherbrooke and Lennoxville.

Adam's many activities at Bishop's included heading the summer program for children in Lennoxville and, as a result, he became an ambassador for Bishop's in the town. "He stood out among the candidates for the award," said Ed Cannon. "We are delighted. He is a fine young person."

Are these three students typical of the young people Bishop's attracts? Yes, they are. Students come to Bishop's because they are participators, whether it is on the women's rugby team or the Business students' debating group or as members of the superb University Choir or on the SRC.

And they are participators because they have taken a chance by venturing to far-off Lennoxville. "Most Bishop's students could have gone to a university down the street or in the next town," commented former SRC President and Rhodes Scholar, Drew Leyburne, a few years ago. "Fundamentally, they are risk takers." That's a neat way of putting it.

Those of us lucky enough to talk to and work with students on campus find out every year our students are an exceptional breed. They create the special flavor that translates into unique feeling of "community" at Bishop's. In short, students are what Bishop's is all about. And students are the only and the best reason for supporting Bishop's.

So, keep the students in mind when you are asked to support Bishop's this year. And support these "risk takers" generously.

New Appointments to Corporation

Bishop's is pleased to announce the following new appointments to Corporation, the governing board of the University.

Bruno-Marie Béchard	Rector, Université de Sherbrooke
Tim Bradley '71	Financial Consultant, Bush Associates
Bill MacDonald '73	Partner and Senior Strategic Planner BrandWorks International Inc.
Jodi White	Managing Partner Sydney House

Bishop's Alumnus appointed new Vice-Principal Administration and Finance

Bishop's is pleased to announce that Mark McLaughlin '84 was appointed Vice-Principal Administration and Finance at Bishop's University effective 4 June 2001. He worked for a number of years with Coopers & Lybrand and was Director of Finance at Bishop's College School.

Margaret started Bishop's in '51 and was notorious for charging her fellow female undergraduates to climb through her residence window as it was the closest to the male dormitories. She stayed at Bishop's for only one year and left to study nursing. It was always her parents' wish for her to complete her degree. In 1993, after she retired, she started studying at Thomas Moore Institute and graduated this year, 50 years after she first came to Bishop's. David '91 and Russell '86 Sangster with their father, John.

John was a blue collar steel worker all his life and, although he was unable attend university, he worked hard to put his two sons through Bishop's. When he retired from the Ingersoll Rand at the age of 68, he started his B.A. at Bishop's. He graduated in 1998 in Geography and decided to go right back to work on his Biology degree and graduated at Convocation 2001.

Convocation 2001

On 2 June 2001, a record 543 students graduated from Bishop's University:

Female: 313	Male: 230
Business	130	(54 female, 76 male)
Education	75	(62 female, 13 male)
Humanities	127	(86 female, 41 male)
Natural Sciences	91	(42 female, 49 male)
Social Sciences	120	(69 female, 51 male)

The following distinguished individuals received honorary degrees of Doctor of Civil Law (honoris causa):

Howard F. Brown, Professor Emeritus of Music and founder of the Music Department at Bishop's University. (Dr. Brown died 11 July 2001.)

Bernard J. Shapiro, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of McGill University.

Charlotte Hunter Tansey, President Emeritus of the Thomas More Institute for Adult Education.

The Honourable Lise Thibault, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec.

Dr. Karl Kuepper was named Professor Emeritus of German and Dr. Paul Lin Professor Emeritus of Mathematics.

Alumni Advice

Bishop's Student Council wants to hear from you

Student reps for 2001-02, (l) Dave Millard, SRC President, and Phil Camino, Director of Finance & Operations, are eager to strengthen the connection between students and Bishop's alumni and friends.

Meet our Student Representatives 2001-02

President: Dave Millard

Originally I come from Iroquois, Ontario, a small town near Ottawa and will be finishing my fourth and final year of an honours degree in Liberal Arts. In the coming year, the SRC hopes to begin the year with a revamped Orientation Week and, throughout the year, run numerous events on campus. We want to strengthen our image in the community by running a few charity events. Our main goal, though, remains being accountable both organizationally and financially to Bishop's students.

After graduation, I hope to take some time to travel and then possibly return to school to either pursue a Master's degree or attend law school. If you have any ideas about the SRC or the relationship between Bishop's students and alumni, please feel free to contact me — it's always nice to talk to people from outside the B.U.bble. I can be reached at (819) 822-9600 ext. 2293 or src@ubishops.ca

Director of Finance & Operations: Philip Camino

I hail from Newmarket, Ontario and am currently in the Williams School of Business & Economics, with a concentration in Finance. Plans for next year include a revamped Frosh Week, increasing the size, scope and quality of events, as well as running a surplus budget. This will be accomplished through increased organization, communication and accountability throughout the SRC.

I plan to work in the financial sector (I know, that's pretty broad) as well as pursue the CFA designation. We are always looking for alumni to talk with and give us ideas about how to improve as a Council. Please do not hesitate to get in touch with me as we would enjoy contact with alumni and friends of Bishop's. I can be reached at pcamino98@ubishops.ca or (819) 822-9600 ext. 2290.

Bishop's students wow them at the U.N.

The Bishop's University Delegation to the North American Model United Nations (sponsored by the United Nations) won two "Honorable Mentions" for their outstanding performances in April 2001. This achievement is somewhat equivalent to winning a CIAU athletic championship; the only difference is that the awards are in the realm of an intellectual cum debating sport. Our 20 students were in competition with approximately 3,000 students from about 25 nations and from the so-called elite U.S. universities, including elite graduate school delegations. Recognition is usually related, in addition to merit, to the nation that a university represents. For instance, if a delegation represents a major European nation and sits on the Security Council, NATO etc., then exposure is greater and the chances of winning recognition is concomitantly greater. If the delegation is large, then the same principle applies.

Bishop's delegation was divided into two: Ireland with 10 students and an NGO (non-governmental organization), Oxfam, with 10. The faculty advisors, Dr. Andrew Johnson and Dr. Ivan Myhul, agreed that, although this representation would provide students with the best learning experience, Bishop's would forego any chance for awards by virtue of minor nation and NGO status and the small size of the two delegations.

Against these nearly impossible odds, both groups — Ireland and Oxfam — won "honourable mention." The students joked to their faculty advisors — only after the event, of course — that they ran the course like drill sargeants at boot camp. But the discipline paid handsome dividends. Each student received a personal letter of congratulation from the Hon. John Manley, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Island Hopping

For David Simpson ’72, Bishop’s was a great start to his global wanderings

A short time ago it occurred to me that most of my life has been spent on islands.

I grew up on Montreal’s West Island. Following Bishop’s I went to graduate school in London (the British Isles). I spent four excruciating months after that above the Arctic Circle on Cornwallis Island.

There was then a total of 10 “continental” years in Toronto and Chicago before stints in Japan, Hong Kong and Australia (the biggest island of all!). Now I work on Manhattan.

This may not be much of a revelation but could possibly explain the wanderlust that those suffering from “island fever” commonly exhibit.

I never planned a nomadic life and my wife certainly didn’t encourage it! It simply happened. However, we have been blessed with a rich variety of experiences — more than making up for the stress of constantly pulling up roots and having to put them down again elsewhere.

I am often asked to describe each stop on the route. The most unique was Tokyo. The most exciting was Hong Kong (1987-89) The most historic was Johannesburg (witnessing the close of the apartheid’s final chapter). The most enjoyable was Melbourne. The most frustrating was Hong Kong (1996). Of course, it wouldn’t be fair to leave out the Big Apple — definitely the most frenetic.

What about the most memorable moments? Well, of course, the birth of my three children Shepard, Beau and Hugh in Hong Kong, South Africa and Australia respectively is tops. However, my first Japanese conversation, seeing the release of Nelson Mandela, sailing through the Great Barrier Reef and lastly watching Hong Kong react in horror to Tiannamen Square and then ten years later joyously reunite with China were all amazing.

How did it all happen. All the “hoser” jokes aside, Canadians travel pretty well overseas. However in truth, Bishop’s gave me a superb grounding for an international career.

How, might you ask, could four years at a small (and, at the time, insular and very Anglo) liberal arts institution in the wilds of French Canada prepare someone for global citizenship? Simple. Bishop’s develops outstanding people skills in its graduates.

Small is not always good, but in the Lennoxville context I found that it created an intimacy that forced everyone to mix, to learn the essentiality of humour and, importantly, understand the responsibilities that come with being part of a community and being a friend. It allowed everyone the opportunity to explore themselves academically, athletically, culturally and socially.

At Bishop’s you simply cannot choose to be anonymous. “No man is an island entire of itself,” to quote John Donne. You have to stand up for yourself and establish an identity. Importantly, at an early age you become a student of human nature. This is a skill that is applicable everywhere in the world and is particularly valuable in my field — the advertising business.

Everyday I put something that I learned at Bishop’s to good use — as often in a non-business context as in my professional activities. This is a constant reminder that your education is not about making a good living but making a good life.

David Simpson is Senior Vice-President, Director of Client Services for Doremus Advertising in New York. He worked in various management positions around the world for J.Walter Thompson: New York (1997-2000), Hong Kong (96-97 and 87-89), Australia (91-95), South Africa (89-90) and Japan (85-87).

David and a fellow employee participated in the Japanese ceremony, “Setsubun,” where householders and people who welcome their birth sign year (12, 24, 36, 48...) scatter soy beans, saying "Fuku wa uchi, Oni wa soto” (“fortune in, devils out”) and eat the numbers of beans of their ages. The ceremony took place in the Asakusa temple in Tokyo in 1986, the Year of the Tiger. David turned 36 and his co-worker turned 24.

Eastern Townships

On a beautiful Saturday afternoon in April, 50 alumni and friends from the Eastern Townships gathered for the first ever family sugaring-off. The afternoon began with a wonderful brunch, which saw more food than anyone could eat. Thanks to Eddie Blake and his beautiful Arabian horses, the kids and their families were treated to a wagon ride around the countryside. Following the wagon rides, everyone received their fill of sugar from the freshly boiled taffy on snow prepared by our hosts, Yvon and France Rodrigue, owners of the sugar shack L'Erabliere du Coin.

Everyone had a great time and is looking forward to returning next year. Special Thanks to KGB's Tim Brink, who played the guitar during the afternoon.

Eastern Townships alumni and their families enjoyed the first ever family sugaring-off last April.

Halifax

A little drizzle did not prevent Maritimers from Nova Scotia from attending the alumni event on the 18th of May at the Old Triangle Irish Alehouse in downtown Halifax. The group, which enjoyed their own private seating on an upper level of the bar, enjoyed ale and hors d'oeuvres. This event was the first in a long time in Halifax; it is hoped that a similar event can be planned in the near future. Long-range plans see the Halifax Branch hosting a major golf tournament early in 2002 for the entire Maritime Bishop's contingency. Thanks to all alumni and friends (not shown in picture) who attended, and especially to Gayle and Jamie Saunders for their efforts in organizing the event.

Saint John

On May 18th, alumni from Saint John, NB met at the popular O'Leary's Irish Pub to relive fond memories of their time spent at Bishop's. Following O'Leary's, the group ventured up the street to Taco Pica, one of Saint John's finest restaurants, for a fabulous dinner. Not only was the food outstanding but the group was also treated to elegant live music during dinner. Although few in numbers, a great time was had by all. Those in attendance decided that more regular events will be organized and a goal will be to increase attendance. Special thanks to Tara Dick, Branch President, for her help in organizing the event.

Toronto

Jeff Cannon Golf 2001

This year's 2nd Annual Toronto Jeff Cannon Memorial Golf Tournament was played on June 16th at the beautiful Hunters' Glen Golf Club in Kleinburg. For the 122 golfers who participated in the event, the scores were low and the greens were in perfect shape. Thanks to all who participated, the tournament was able to raise over $6,200 for the Jeff Cannon Memorial Fund. Special thanks to Kirsten Harrett '83 of Deer Park Lodge and David Colfer '90 of Langostina Cookware for their generous prize donations and Pat Shiels '89 for his help in organizing the tournament. We look forward to returning in 2002 to the Hunters' Glen Golf Club for the 3rd Annual Tournament with a capacity crowd.

Bishop's University Foundation: Taking care of your donations

S.R. McMorran '60
Chairman, Bishop's University Foundation

(When you donate to Bishop's, your gift is entrusted to our Foundation. Bud McMorran, Chairman, explains how the Foundation works to make sure Bishop's receives the greatest benefit from your money.)

Mission

The Bishop's University Foundation raises and manages funds to help advance the University's goals. The Foundation recognizes that charitable donations must supplement government grants to fulfil these goals and maintain Bishop's emphasis on "excellence in teaching enriched by scholarship and research."

Annual Giving

When you make a gift to Bishop's, the Foundation ensures that it is directed to the fund you wish. Undesignated gifts are allocated to the University's highest priority which, at this time, is financial assistance and reward for students.

Our Endowment

Because endowments provide Bishop's with a reliable source of income every year, the Foundation aims to build its endowment. We grow the endowment largely through donations to trust funds, which are capitalized, and effective investment and spending policies. In 2000, the Foundation managed an endowment with a market value of about $17.5 million.

In 1995, $3 million in trusts were restricted to student support; the amount is now $8.4 million and yet still a far cry from the University's needs. Other trust fund priorities include research, guest speakers, the library.

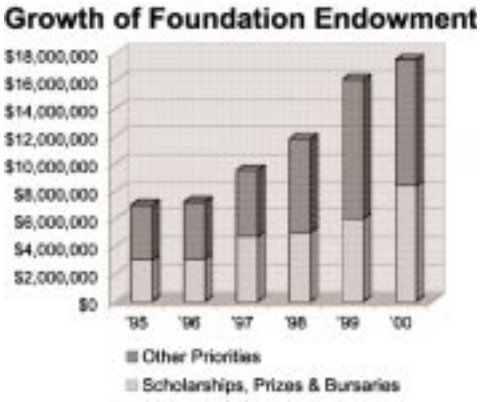
Contributions to Bishop's

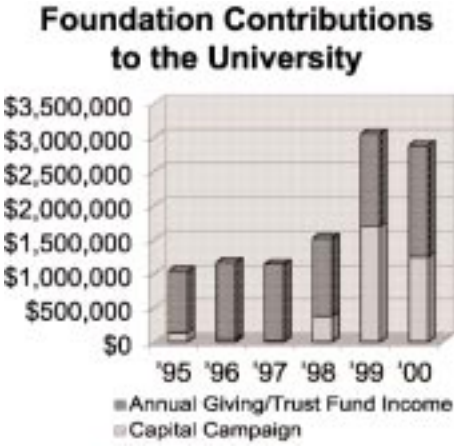
Since 1995 the amount contributed by the Foundation to Bishop's from annual giving and trust income has almost doubled. Thanks also to the Partners in Learning Campaign, yearly contributions from the Foundation have been over one million for years.

Scholarships

Bishop's is proud of the academic achievements of our students. Our incoming class last year saw 21.9% on scholarship, and the number of students who retain or renew their scholarships in upper years has also increased.

There is a price for success, however. The cost of our scholarship programme has tripled in the past three years, bringing annual investment in students to $1,000,000. Our priority for the Foundation is to gain additional trust funds restricted to student support. Where will we find donors to help our students? From people like you.





How you can give to Bishop's and save taxes:

Federal Tax Credits
- For your first $200 in donations — tax credit of 17%
- Additional donations — tax credit of 29%

Quebec Tax Credits
- For your first $2,000 in donations — tax credit of 21%
- Additional donations — tax credit of 25%

Combined tax credits: about 52%

Tax Consequences
- Donations are tax deductible to the extent of 75% of net income in the year of donation. Excess amounts may be carried forward for up to five years.
- Estate bequests are deductible to the extent of 100% of net income in the year of death, and may be carried back to the extent of 100% of net income in the preceding year.

Beneficial Tax Changes
- Capital gains inclusion rate lowered on gifts of listed securities to fi of regular capital gains tax (to 25% from 50%).
- Capital gains inclusion rate lowered on gifts of employee stock options.

Please make Bishop's foremost in your charitable plans.

Three long-serving members of faculty retire

Karl Kuepper

Dr. Karl J. Kuepper came to Bishop's in 1979 from the University of New Brunswick. He brought to Bishop's his passion for linguistics, literature, teaching, and administration; and for over 20 years he has been an integral part of life at this university.

Karl was Dean of Faculty from 1979-87 and showed in that office his qualities of collegiality, toughness and resilience. In spite of the difficulties inherent in that position, he earned the enduring respect and admiration of those who worked with him. In 1987 he joined the German Department, where he assisted in the development of programmes in the areas of German and, latterly, Modern Languages.

Over the years, Karl did much to enhance the national and international profile of our university. He always maintained his connections with his native Germany, and he was active in many professional associations. He was a long-standing member of the Canadian Association of University Teachers of German, serving as president from 1986-88. He was also active in the World University Service of Canada, the Canadian Federation for the Humanities, and the International Association of Teachers of German. Karl was particularly interested in establishing exchange opportunities, and Bishop's now sees a regular influx of visiting German students, thanks in large measure to his efforts.

Karl's accomplishments as a teacher were also substantial. His exemplary skills in the classroom were recognized in 1995 when he received the William and Nancy Turner Award for Teaching.

In terms of research, Karl's interests have been eclectic. His publications have encompassed diverse subjects — from symbolism in Kafka to speech-act theory in second language teaching; from problems in translation to the evolution from oral to written discourse in medieval town documents. His passion for languages has also been reflected in his many conference presentations and teacher training seminars, and in his tireless efforts to enhance language teaching at Bishop's.

These broad interests came as a natural extension of Karl's early background in German and English Philology (Cologne and Münster), Education (Cologne) and American literature and history (Amherst College). Not surprising, then, that his conversations frequently had the air of the roller coaster about them, careening from the banal to the comic to the arcane to the sublime in the space of a few phrases. Consonant shifts in Old High German, idiomatic variations in Quebec French, phraseology in Frost's poetry, the irony manifested in Death of a Salesman and in the latest episode of Seinfeld — all became objects of lively and intense speculation.

Karl was, above all, the embodiment of collegiality. With Karl, one was struck by the sense that a university is a gathering place for people working for a common cause; a place where grammar, rhetoric, and logic interact; a place where discourse will prevail — where one sits among peers and argues, advocates, cajoles, and persuades things from abstraction into application.

Karl will long remain an inspiration to his colleagues in Humanities. Few have done more to preserve the best aspects of Bishop's liberal arts tradition. In this regard, it is especially fitting that he was honoured with the status of Emeritus Professor at the June 2001 Convocation.

I join Karl's colleagues in wishing him a long and happy retirement.

Stephen Sheeran
Chair, Department of Modern Languages

Garry Retzleff

Garry Retzleff may be retiring, but he's certainly not retiring; no, he's outgoing, energetic, dynamic. His enthusiasm explains why Garry has always been a very popular teacher. He taught a wide variety of courses: an Eighteenth-Century Literature specialist who, in recent years, undertook the teaching of Commonwealth — or perhaps I should use the politically correct "Postcolonial" — with a genuine passion. His Caribbean Literature last term was one of our most successful courses and inspired the immensely enjoyable Caribbean Party his wife, Marjorie, and he so generously hosted for English students.

In his earlier years here, Garry taught Literary Criticism and "The Bible and Literature," with a generous dollop of Northrop Frye in both. He also taught a course on 17th, 18th, and 19th century Architecture in the early days of the Fine Arts Department; and he was, in fact, a major influence in the establishing of this department.

Garry has always given his all for the good of the English Department. He has, for example, been willing to fill in when someone is sick; he offered to do so for me on one occasion (fortunately it did not prove necessary), and he did so when someone became ill towards the end of the last fall term, even though he was on sabbatical at the time. He has often said that, in his view, the well-being of our students is of the utmost importance. In this regard, too, he has maintained an open door policy and is always available. This openness also applies to his house; not only has it been the site of many an enjoyable gathering, but Marjorie and he have also always made new members of faculty very welcome there.

Garry served two terms as Dean of Humanities (I think he'd regard this as the appropriate phrasing). To this position he brought his characteristic time and energy. The only regret the English Department, and its students, had about this was that it took Garry away from the classroom too much of the time.

In addition to these achievements, Garry was involved in many other activities. His willingness to ask people to give to the University's capital campaigns immediately comes to mind; and his open-door policy came into play here too, as he and Marjorie hosted "donor" receptions at their home. Garry was also very actively involved in St. Mark's Chapel, and in Anglicanism in general; one of the high points of his time at Bishop's, he claims, was meeting Archbishop Tutu when he came to Bishop's to receive an honorary degree. He was active in arranging programmes for Centennial Theatre and the Art Gallery, and served on the boards of Bishop's College School and The Piggery.

Garry has been able to combine business and pleasure: he not only owns a villa in Turkey, but has also, in recent years, been engaged in writing a book on Early Christian sites in Turkey. His research interests reflect his peripatetic leanings, with work on the Elgin Marbles and eighteenth-century British travel narratives, for example. Now Marjorie and he will be able to devote more time to this wanderlust.

Garry, we all wish Marjorie and you a very well-deserved and enjoyable retirement.

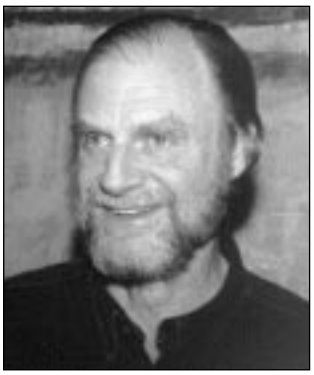
David Sorensen



David Sorensen came to the Bishop's Fine Arts faculty in 1981 and held a permanent half-time position in studio art from 1983 until his retirement last fall. David was truly a teacher and a practicing artist. He succeeded in reconciling the local and private with the cosmopolitan and public. Some of my most vivid memories of him as a colleague are rural: visions of his austere barn cum studio in the countryside near Ayer's Cliff — a cavernous white room with a lonely wood-burning stove at its center. But there are more worldly and cosmopolitan memories as well, for David was involved in the art centres of Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver, New York, and Tokyo. He has exhibited and sold works around the globe, from New Orleans to Manila, Hong Kong and Mexico City.

Patience is one of David's great virtues, an odd one in someone juggling so many balls at once. While raising a family, building and continuously renovating their home, and maintaining an international exhibition schedule, he nonetheless dedicated himself to the development and promotion of the Bishop's Fine Arts Department and Art Gallery. He always had time for students and for hosting other artists and professors of art, making possible the sharing of their expertise with the Bishop's community. David went out into the art world and brought the art world to Bishop's, while still finding time to create serene and meditative abstract artworks in his studio.

Described as "a great source of inspiration" by a colleague in the studio programme, he encouraged students and colleagues alike to break new ground and embark on fresh and ambitious projects. Some were realized, others only briefly, and a few remained in the dream stage. Among the dreams that David and others worked long hours to realize was the erection of the Molson Fine Arts Building with a large painting studio, allowing students to gain experience in working on a monumental scale. He persevered in the creation of an art gallery at Bishop's, from its early days as a barely funded, closet-sized space in the student centre to the present spacious, custom-built facility next to Centennial Theatre. Developing an exchange programme with the University of Guadalajara was a dream that materialized only briefly, but long enough for several groups of Bishop's students to have the unique experience of art and language study in Mexico. Projects like these have affected our life and its quality, even when they were not fully realized. An artist without dreams, without "unrealizable" ideas, is perhaps not an artist.

To say David has retired would be grossly inaccurate. Since leaving Bishop's he has completed a group of seven paintings commissioned from New Jersey and participated in a major exhibition in Guadalajara sponsored by the Canadian embassy. In July David's work was on exhibit at the Centre d'Arts Orford de Magog. A major ten-year retrospective of his work opened July 1 in Valcourt at the Yvonne L. Bombardier Foundation and will run until October 1. His prophetically entitled piece, L'Arc Déplacé, originally designed for the lobby of Salle Maurice O'Bready at the Université de Sherbrooke, has been displaced, all 1600 pounds of it, and will be exhibited with 30 other works. To keep abreast of David's manifold activity, visit his website (www.geocities.com/sorensendavid/fson.html), or write him at dsoren37@hotmail.com. Several of his pieces can be seen on campus, among them a large metal sculpture in the open air between the Theatre and the Fine Arts building.

We will miss David and his wife Bella, who has helped us all with great cheer and generosity, continually supporting the endeavors of her husband and the Fine Arts Department at Bishop's. We wish them well.

Faculty Profile

Professor Denise Fortier of the Williams School of Business and Economics is the 2001 recipient of The William and Nancy Turner Award for Teaching.

Professor Fortier graduated from Bishop's University in 1987 with a BBA in Marketing and completed her Master's degree in Speech Communication at California State University Northridge in 1992. Professor Fortier joined Bishop's faculty in 1995, bringing with her several years of industry and teaching experience as an authority in the field of communication.

Professor Denise Fortier of the Department of Economics received the William and Nancy Turner Teaching Award at Convocation.

Her students have benefitted greatly from her knowledge and experience. They describe her lectures as "unique," "insightful" and "daring" in that they unleash the creativity buried in them and motivate them to learn. Her cheery disposition and open-mindedness are able to turn the most timid into active class participants, unreservedly voicing their opinions on current events. They marvel at her mastery of three disciplines: Marketing, Management and Human Resources, all of which she has taught here at Bishop's. They further appreciate her fairness and describe her as an excellent role model as an individual and as a Bishop's graduate.

Professor Fortier's commitment to her students extends beyond the classroom. When not competing herself in international wheelchair races, she is often seen cheering her students on at sporting events and is a regular at student-faculty activities. Her office door always remains open for individual help in coursework and for consultation on employment matters. To show their appreciation for her efforts, her students regularly offer to take her assistance dog, Romano, for campus walks and sneak him dog treats on their way to class.

Professor Fortier's students, or her fans, as they call themselves, have nominated her for the teaching award in appreciation of her energy, enthusiasm and commitment to teaching.

Add your name to Bishop's e-mail directory

Lost touch with a Bishop's classmate, roommate, teammate, professor? When you register with Bishop's e-mail directory, your name is added to the growing list of alumni who enjoy keeping in touch with old friends over the net.

Our e-mail directory is free for Bishop's graduates. You can search the directory for a special friend or get a listing of all members of a particular class who have registered on our directory.

Only alumni and friends can access the directory, and there is even a private mail feature to hide your e-mail address from view if you wish. We'll keep you up to date on what's happening for Bishop's alumni and friends — members of the directory will receive news of upcoming events in their region.
