Boundary Disputes Between Great Britain the United States.

I MAINE BOUNDARY 1782-83

Fox had been kept in ignorance of the fact, that Oswald had been intrusted by Shelburne with full power, and Grenville was the first to enlighten Fox about the private paper before mentioned. Furious at the intelligence, and the incompetence of Oswald, Fox moved that he should be recalled, but the motion, unfortunately, was lost. He then determined to make a last effort to assert his position, and moved that the independence of the United States be unconditionally acknowledged, which would have placed the matter in his own hands. Shelburne of course opposed this and the cabinet was equally divided, but for some reason, General Conway, a veteran of this unwarranted intrusion into their territory, requesting him to forward their complaints to Washington. The Federal authorities urged by the State of Maine instructed their envoy in London to demand Greeley's release. Lord Palmerston refused the demand and Greeley remained in prison till the rebellion of the "Habitants" in the same year when he was released to avoid complications with the States. But this incident and the rebellion itself hastened the settlement of the dispute. In the rebellion of 1837 the Canadian refugees while attempting to enlist the sympathy of the States in their cause, exerted themselves to aggravate the citizens of the States against Great Britain and the province, and they did not forget to harp upon what they called "Great Britain's appropriation of territory belonging to the United States." The fruit of this is seen in the present unjust boundary. At this time the Legislature of Maine voted $800,000 for the defence of the State and the Legislature of Nova Scotia made a grant of $100,000 to assist New Brunswick in the defence of her boundary, a vote which met with the unusual reception of deafening cheers from the crowded galleries. Things now began to look serious, but happily the combined efforts of the Federal and British governments prevented the quarrel between the Province and State from becoming international.

Hallowe'en

Weirdly waiileth the live night long
 The wind with its ghostly phantom song,
 List, list, list to the song.
 An owl it is that hooteth harsh,
 And a flickering light that flits in the marsh,—
 Flits, flits, flits in the marsh.
 A breath, a rustle, a shrilling shriek,
 As phosphorus gleams the grey sky streak.
 Gleams, gleams, the grey sky streak
 Hush! for the charm-bound chargers fly
 With their withered burdens through the sky,—
 Through, through, through the sky.
 The witches ride in the dim moonlight,
 Ride through the sky all the livelong night,
 Ride, ride, ride through the night.

Why English Should be Taught in Colleges.

Not many years since, a discontent which had been growing in the educational world for several generations, reached its culmination. For a long time Englishmen had been dissatisfied with their schools and universities; they felt these institutions failed to do their proper work; their children were in a great degree ignorant of what they ought to know and accomplished in much that was comparatively worthless; and at this state of things many murmured. The murmurs did not proceed from grumblers and novelty-seekers, but thoughtful men spoke out in protest against the existing system, though at first no hearing was vouchsafed. But there came a time when protests were heard, and school-doors and College-gates were thrown open to subjects that long asked in vain for admission. The ordinary education of an Englishman or American at the close of the Nineteenth Century is a very different thing from what it was when that Century began. The Nineteenth Century will be as memorable in the history of education as the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries, when Greek and the "New Philosophy" at last took their place in the Schools and Universities. The new comers in the educational world of the Nineteenth Century were, generally speaking, the English language and literature, modern literature and languages other than English, and Natural Science. In Richard the Second's time, English was admitted into the schools as a teaching medium; it is now admitted as a subject taught. The reign of Victoria will be as conspicuous in the history of our language in its connection with education as is now the reign of Richard the Second.

It is intended here to set down a few familiar facts in regard to the value of the teaching of English which should not be permitted to drop out of mind even under circumstances which may in some instances demand that for a time they be disregarded or kept in abeyance. It is grotesque to think that there are still institutions, of some pretensions and designed to turn out professional men, where no attention, or attention of the most inadequate sort, is given to the study of English. Though the English language and literature have taken places in the curricula of the large educational institutions on both sides of the water, these subjects are still slighted here and there by the smaller institutions of learning where the occupant of this chair or that is requested by those in authority to take a hand at them, and devote to them the fag end of his time and energy.

black and white, is the stimulus which comes from the personal contact with a man whose spirit is aglow with an enthusiasm for all things literary. This contact will be especially valuable, at least in the writer's opinion, if the instruction is carried on by the use of the Socratic method (where the point is made and knowledge imparted as though it were all the student's personal discovery) combined with lectures. The former method is invaluable; questions are asked as they rise in the mind, and the high road to answers suggested, and often a word in time or a gesture will do the work of a volume in setting the student in the way to literary salvation, or in stopping him in the course that leads to literary shipwreck. The lectures serve to bind together into unity the points started in discussion.

To conclude, then, let us say that the English language and literature have won a place for themselves in the educational scheme of the day in the face of the opposition of Academic Philistines, and that this place is assured by the consensus of educational opinion. English should be taught because a mastery of the language is useful in every sense of the word and cannot be properly attained without systematic instruction. So far as the literature proper is concerned, instruction therein gives a shorter cut to literary knowledge, and, at last, far better results in quality and quantity of accomplishment will be obtained with it, than without it. It is instruction that brings many into a literary heritage from which they would otherwise be cut off. There are others to whom literature may render this practical service (such as it is),—it may save them from the contempt to which illiteracy, in its more glaring phases, is always exposed. Last, but far from least, there is the stimulus (great or small in proportion to the knowledge, taste, enthusiasm, and magnetism of the teacher) which comes only from personal contact with an instructor.

Let us hope that in the educational world the mother tongue and the literature may ever come to, and hold, their own. The literature has ever been a weapon of true temper for attack upon the strongholds of ignorance, prejudice and dulness. May it still continue to shake narrow prejudice and limited views, and constrain those who hold them to overhaul the foundations of their fortresses.

Alumni Society Meeting.

Immediately after Convocation on June 27th. last, a meeting of the Alumni of Bishop's College was held in the Bishop Williams' Hall, the following gentlemen being present:—Rev. Principal Whitney, Rev. Professor Scarth, Rev. A. H. Robertson, Rev. Albert Stevens, Rev. G. H. A. Murray, Rev. A. J. Balfour, Rev. J. Almond, Rev. F. G. Vial, Rev. C. W. Balfour, Rev. F. G. LeGallais, Rev. P. Callis, L. R. Holme, Esq., W. Morris, Esq., Dr. Petry, W. R. Hibbard, W. W. Wadleigh, J. H. Kellar, G. E. Weagant, J. G. Ward, R. A. Cowling, W. T. Wheeler, A. H. Baker, W. M. Gordon, V. Bonelli, H. A. Mackie, O. E. Rublee, C. W. Mitchell;—all graduates of Bishop's University.

Dr. Whitney was unanimously elected chairman of the meeting.

A discussion followed as to the advisability of forming an Alumni Society and concerning the objects of such a Society.

It was then decided that the Alumni should form themselves into a Society with a view to advancing the general interests of the University and especially to securing new students.

It was then moved by L. R. Holme, Esq. seconded by Rev. P. Callis, that the officers of this Society be, President, two Vice-Presidents, Secretary-Treasurer and a Committee of five—carried.

The following officers were then elected:—

President—Dr. John Hamilton,
 Vice-Presidents—Rev. A. H. Moore, M. A. W. W. Wadleigh B. A.
 Sec. Treas.—C. W. Mitchell, M. A.
 Committee—Rev. F. G. Vial, M. A., Robt. Campbell Esq.,
 M. A. Phelan, B. A., G. E. Weagant, B. A., J. Kellar, B. A.

It was moved by Rev. G. H. A. Murray seconded by Rev. A. H. Moore, that the Committee be requested to draft a Constitution—carried.

The question of qualifications for membership was then brought forward and on the motion of Mr. Holme seconded by Rev. F. G. Vial, it was resolved that all undergraduates of the second and third year be eligible as Associate Members (exact terms to be decided by the Committee).

It was suggested that the next meeting be held at the time of the S. Francis Deanery meeting in December. But all arrangements were left in the hands of the Committee.

The interest taken in the proceedings by the large number of Alumni present augurs well for the future of the Society.

As soon as the Committee have drawn up the Constitution, copies will be printed and sent out to all the Alumni.

Musical Notice.

The formation of a Musical Club at Lennoxville, during the winter months, is at present under consideration. It is proposed to have ten or twelve musical recitals, consisting of instrumental solos, duets for two pianos and songs, the recitals to take place in the evening, fortnightly, probably in the Church Hall, if enough members join to pay expenses. The charge for each member, performing or non-performing, will be fifty cents for the whole season. This will include admittance to all recitals, with the possible exception of a public concert. Any ladies or gentlemen desirous of joining are requested to communicate with the Mrs. (Hon.) Henry Aylmer, Mrs. Frith, Mrs. McKindsey, or Mrs. J. P. Whitney, The Lodge, Bishops' College. The club is being formed expressly for the performance of good music, vocal and instrumental. It is hoped that many who do not care to perform will join as non-performing members.

PERSONALS.

C. A. Pope and W. W. Wadleigh have entered the Law Faculty at McGill.

M. A. Phelan is also a student in the same Faculty. We have just heard that Mr. Phelan is recovering from a serious illness.

B. A. Planche, '96 is practising dentistry in Coaticooke.

R. H. Bates, '97 has recently been appointed to a very good position in Ashbury College, Ottawa.

E. R. Roy, '99 will take the work in the Kirkdale Mission until a successor to the late Rev. W. J. Curran has been appointed.

J. W. Aytoun L. S. T., '00 is entering Durham University, England with a view to taking the full B. A. course.

E. G. Simpson, '97 is now on the Medical Staff of the Maternity Hospital, Montreal.

E. F. King, '99 has lately been transferred from the E. T. Bank at Sherbrooke to the branch at Coaticooke.

We had a short but pleasant visit from V. Bonelli a few days ago.

Rev. W. E. Patterson, '97 is working at Milford in the Diocese of New Hampshire.

Since our July issue we have heard with pleasure of the following marriages:—

Rev. J. C. Tannar, '98, Kinnear's Mills, to Miss Winnifred Symmes, Nicolet. Mr. D. W. Thompson, '99 to Miss Bertha Kelly, Toronto. The Mitre wishes them every happiness.

Of last year's third year, Messrs. Wheeler and Baker have entered the Divinity Course; Messrs. Mackie and Bonelli have entered McGill; Mr. Gordon is studying Theology at the New York General Theological Seminary:—Mr. Hunting is teaching in the Hatley Academy and Mr. Crowley is still on the staff of B. C. School.

Rev. H. F. Hamilton who has been Assistant Curate at S. Matthew's Church, was ordained to the Priesthood on S. Luke's day and will continue his work in Quebec.

At the Ordination Service no less than four former Rectors' of S. Matthew's were present viz. The Venerable Archdeacon Roe, The Bishop of Ottawa, Rev. Dr. Allnatt, Very Rev. Dean Williams. Add to this number the name of the present Rector Rev. F. G. Scott, and the reason of the eminence of S. Matthew's Church becomes perfectly clear.

Rev. P. Callis has recently been transferred from the position of travelling Missionary to that of Assistant in the Grand Mère Mission with head quarters at Radnor Forges.

Those who were members of the Freshmen year of 1894 will hear with much regret of the death of J. A. Lomas, Sherbrooke. Mr. Lomas spent one year at Bishop's where his frank and generous character made him a great favorite.

In the list of clergy presented to the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York during the recent Royal visit to Sherbrooke, we noticed with much pleasure the name of Rev. C. W. Balfour, Arts '97.

The Rev. B. G. Wilkinson late Professor of Pastoral Theology has accepted a curacy in an English Parish.

OBITUARY.

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Mr. J. W. Weagant, on Monday October 21st, after a long illness. Though he was with us as a student for only a short time last year, yet he had made many friends among us and we deeply mourn his death. We desire to express our sympathy to his relations and especially to his brother Mr. George E. Weagant, our fellow student.

EDITORIALS.

The visit of the Royal guests to Sherbrooke drew a large but silent crowd. However, the lack of cheering was not, we are sure, a sign of disloyalty, nor a failure to appreciate the condescension of their highnesses, but rather it was an inaudible expression of awe and respect. Yet whatever we white men contrived not to do, our red brothers made up for with a great outburst of patriotic enthusiasm. Gathered about the Royal car they shouted and waved their arms, singing "God save the King" with a wholesome heartiness that must have cheered the very heart of Royalty itself.

We do not wish to take a stand either with homeopathy or with aleopathy, for after much observation of the ways of life it seems clear to us that those men exist most happily and prosperously who take a middle course. No one can deny the utility, however, of sugar-coated pills, for even a bad potato is more palatable when browned. In like manner a pointed meaning veiled in soft words is often more effectual than a blunt, explosive truth. A neat stab with a delicate, beautiful little stiletto is far more artistic than the brutal blowing to atoms of a bomb. The biggest fool on earth will become very angry, and even more foolish, when called by his proper name, and the teller of an untruth, if dubbed a liar, is more apt to feel the prickings of rage than of conscience; yet if a skilful manipulator of the elements of human character contrives in an indirect and unexpected way to touch our latent sensibility to remorse, immediately we feel a certain bitterness that soon melts penitence. Indeed the same is true, by analogy, in teaching. Let a teacher assume an absolute and purely didactic attitude, and he will see his scholars fly into rebellion, or what is very similar, indifference. On the other hand let the pedagogue lead, suggest, and guide so that in spite of themselves the pupils continually discover something new, and he will have a class that will respect him, work for him, and obey him.

Of course we have written the above because we know, a little better than every one else, what ought to be done. The Mitre is not very old, but like Cupid it combines the freshness and innocence of a babe with the wisdom of a serpent. In a way the Mitre has lived many lives in one, possessing—though by a different process—all the characteristics of a man who has lived a stormy life, till about ready to fall earthwards like a withered leaf, suddenly quaffing of the elixir of life, he feels a new power and a new warmth coursing through old veins.

While in a critical vein, the Mitre does not wish to stop at giving advice to future pedagogues, but desires also to reproach the contributors of college magazines in general for failing to produce an adequate supply of 'stories'. Essays, reviews, editorials, and brief notices are all very well in a proper proportion, yet there is a point at which the average reader begins to crave for lighter and more spicy matter. Short stories are, alas! too few. Speaking from a personal knowledge of students, we can assert that in spite of dignity of treatment and solemnity of theme in most college magazine articles, nevertheless many undergraduates possess their due share of sentiment and imagination. The trouble is not lack of ability, but rather fear of the undertaking. To write a love story or a tale of adventure demands great courage for the first attempt. However, we hope that the inherent bravery of the Anglo-Saxon will overcome the terror of a new and unknown enterprise.

THE COLLEGE.

Divinity Notes.

Overheard by the little bird, on the grand-stand in Sherbrooke, the day of the reception to the Duke and Duchess.

First speaker: Who is that gentleman who is being presented?

Second speaker: I don't know but I see that he is wearing a blue hood.

First speaker: Yes, and now he is walking backwards.

Second Speaker: O! well then; he must be a bishop.

Professor and Mrs. Wilkinson have moved into their new house.

On the evening of the 24th the students were kindly invited by Professor Dunn into his house to meet the Bishop and Mrs. Dunn, and spent a very pleasant evening.

The first meeting of the Brotherhood of Readers was held on Friday, Oct. 4th, the Warden, Prof. Dunn, presiding. The following officers were elected:—Vice Warden, R. A. Cowling, B. A.; Secretary, W. T. Wheeler, B. A.

The Warden announced that he intended to revise the rules of the Brotherhood, adding or eliminating clauses where advisable. The members unanimously expressed their approval of this plan; they considered that a few changes for the better

ARTS NOTES.

Two very interesting debates were held in the council chamber since the last issue of The Mitre. The first was one of prime importance to those studying with a view to Holy orders "Resolved that extemporaneous preaching should be practiced among the younger clergy." The upholders of the resolution were:—Messrs. Ward B. A., Rivard and Vibert. The motion was opposed by Messrs. Weagant B. A., Everett and Fletcher. The judges, Messrs. Wheeler B. A., Shewen and Bonsfield, decided in favour of the negative as having won the majority of points. There were a few side speeches which were rather inclined to the laughable side. We were pleased to hear Prof. Dunn in his maiden speech in this society. He took up a neutral stand, neither encouraging extemporaneous preaching, nor preaching from manuscript. Dr. Whitney ably and well, acted as critic and we feel sure that we benefited from his quiet yet close criticism.

The second debate was again a success, and one that was of keen interest to us all. The subject for resolution was, that "the government of Great Britain is better than that of the United States." The affirmative was ably upheld by Messrs. Hawks, Rollit and Gillis. The negative just as ably by Messrs. Krans, Plaskett and Lancaster. The speeches were all good and each speaker upheld his side in a manly way regardless of his belief. The judges, Messrs. Ward B. A., Rivard and Vibert after a long wait decided in favour of the negative as winning only by a small majority of points. While the judges were arriving at their decision a few side speeches filled with wit broke the possibility of monotony. Mr. Crowdy as a critic was very successful and took up perhaps the best way of criticising, that of mentioning both the good and bad points in delivery and substance of each speech. On the whole the evening was both pleasantly and intellectually spent.

THE FRESHMEN.

Take them up tenderly
Lift them with care
Fashioned so slenderly
Young (?) and so rare.
(With humble apologies to Leigh Hunt.)

Much good and sound advice has been given to the freshmen in our last issue, but now owing to a particular case we beg to respectfully submit the following to those who are not new men and belong to the old school. In the first place treat the freshmen as your equals, even if you are a third year man. If any among them happen to have been at another College, these you must take great care to recognize as on equality with yourself. Make way for him in the halls. Give place to him at the table. Never say book to a freshman. Never answer him back. Be careful not to hurt his feelings. He is not supposed to know any thing of the world—yet he is quite confident that he "knows everything" and will often intimate the same to his professor. Put yourself out to greet him with a smile and a cheerful good morning, even though he scorns to notice you. Above all things remember that they are the new kind of freshmen—those of the Twentieth Century. What kind will the next Century produce? Still, living in hopes, we bid them welcome.

Tommy seems to have much difficulty to know from which end of the table he should receive his daily rations. After a great deal of discussion, and when a settlement was almost reached, it was discovered that he belonged to neither this end nor that but to the middle, which according to his mathematical powers he is pleased to term the "Centre of Attraction."

The nautical men have taken up their quarters in the stern of this old ship. We trust that with two such experienced seamen at the helm, the good old ship Bishop's may pursue a good course and land us in June safely, a years voyage nearer the goal.

Two new pictures are soon to be presented to the common room. One is "Grand-pa" on his way to the examination, and the other on his way to the dining hall.

There has not been for many years such a good college spirit among the Arts Students as there is this year. Every man seems contented, and is ready for work, and after we have become "acquainted" with the new men there will be every prospect of hard and sound work.

It must be gratifying to B—S to find among the new men one with whom he has something in common. But it is hard on us to be awakened at night by these awful screams.

Oh for a cat! A cat is badly needed in the Arts building, for mice, and even rats, are over running the place, and by far exceed the number of students. We cannot sleep peaceably at night for the constant sporting of mice about our rooms. And they are such daring mice. One was bold enough to crawl up the leg of a man writing a letter, but the poor mouse lost all courage as soon as he saw the face of the owner of the leg. Such a face is too much for even the venturesome mice of Bishop's College.

"Variety is the spice of life", so says the Arts philosopher. We all like a variety in daily life and daily food, and detest a monotony of either. But such a variety as ordering at a Quebec hotel ice-cream with cauliflower is exceeding even the bounds of variety. Possibly the person believing with our philosopher that "variety is the spice of life", and anxious for some spice, lacked a knowledge of combinations; or probably it was through absent-mindedness, while thinking of some one in Lennoxville, that he gave such an erratic order.

With the amount of rice-pudding that the training table has been getting, one wonders that we cannot speak Chinese. Some one wittily suggested that rice-pudding be hereafter named Chinese marmalade.

The seniors of the Arts building have taken upon themselves the new role of moralists. It is a hard task yet immensely gratifying. This innovation has caused many a heart-felt groan especially from those who saw their dearly loved pictures, which we thought were not conducive to hard study, nor to each particular individual's esprit de corps, go up in smoke.

There are some people in this world that are never satisfied with what the Fates have seen fit to allot, but are desirous of everything within or without their reach. We have some newcomers, in this place of liberty and freedom, (we can't say freshmen, since so many different views of the name have been propounded to us) who grumble on the harsh treatment and restraint that is so unjustly inflicted upon them. One wants a key to the mail bag, not because he thinks that he should have to wait until the curator opens the bag but because he is a Professor. In fact it has been so intimated to us. Another wants bath tickets. This one is not satisfied with the every day shampoo of his beauteous locks but wants a monopoly of the baths. Oh! how we wish that some people we well know, had but followed his example, when with us.

WANTED:—A Second Year Editor. Must be a man of exemplary habits; must not drink, smoke or chew; must keep good hours. Must have the following characteristics: pleasant face, hair parted in the middle; ready wit; must never say "I cawnt"; must be able to read, write, and count to one hundred; say the alphabet backwards and talk through his hat. Salary (guaranteed) 10 per cent of surplus after all Mitre debts have been paid. Applications must be made to the "Wild Man of Borneo". Apply early and avoid the rush.

Our friend Bill is walking around with a solitaire(y) face.

(Arts editor, to footballer, asking for an Arts note:—) "Has any thing within the past three weeks struck you forcibly?" (Footballer, taking wrong meaning:—) "Yes, I got struck pretty hard in the game last Saturday".

Ques. "Why is the girl of a man named Will, like a pig?"

G—l—s:—"What does a seat of war mean?"

F—l—r:—"I don't know any more than I do what a standing army is."

L—t—r:—"Why, you ignominus, the seat of war is for the standing army to sit down on when it gets tired."

J—y:—"Looks like thirty cents, eh?"

J—t:—"What, the match in Quebec?"

J—y:—"No! A nickel and a quarter."

B. wanting a beard:—Wish I could raise chin whiskers like yours!"

Man with beard:—"Try drinking goat's milk."

leaving the score 19 to 10.

After hearty cheers, the teams left the field confident that they had done their best and bearing in mind the old proverb, "To the victor belongs the spoils and to the vanquished the glory."

After the match a very enjoyable evening was passed at Clement Theatre in Sherbrooke. We sincerely hope that the Quebec men enjoyed it, and also hope that before long we will again have the pleasure of meeting them.

E. C. Bonin was the referee and he filled the difficult position with success. The game was not at all in the nature of a pink tea and the collaring was very rough, but the referee was not very often

SCHOOL NOTES.

On Wednesday Oct. 16, their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of York, paid their long looked for visit to Sherbrooke. By the kindness of Colonel Fraser the Cadet Corps were invited to take part in the reception, being stationed at one side of the platform. The boys went down to Sherbrooke on a special car early in the afternoon and took up their station in excellent time. The reception has been described elsewhere and we will not enlarge called upon to penalize any players, though Butler was twice sent to the side. Fletcher and Bousfield were also given a few minutes rest. Both sides were several times penalized for off-side play, especially College.

PUNTS.

"Manny" Shewen was sorely missed. Bonin handed out free kicks with a liberal hand.

"The man with the big head" was a terror to the Quebec captain.

Muffing does not count. The score should have been 19-2.

Quebec had a great advantage in weight.

Stocking's fine punting into touch was a feature.

upon it. Four of the bugle band were selected to carry up the bear-skin rug presented by the Ladies of Sherbrooke to Her Royal Highness. The boys who were Holloway, Nelson, Morewood and Irwin 11, performed their duty very smartly and well.

The Duke of York walked round the square and inspected the troops who were on the ground. He seemed greatly interested in the School Corps, and asked a good many questions about the School, saying that Admiral Rawson was his old commander when he entered the Navy. The day was very successful and the appearance of the School Corps reflected great credit on the officers, especially Wilkinson and the Sergeant.

FOOTBALL.

Since our last number, football has been in full swing and the team is now in something like good shape. We have been very unfortunate in not having our captain with us the whole year, for, as we said before, he was laid up with an injured leg. His place however was ably filled by Adams who has spent a great deal of trouble and time on the team and much of its present good form is due to him. One thing that helped the game on in the School is the announcement made by Dr. Petry, that football was to be made compulsory. Since that time the fellows have turned out much more regularly for practice. It is a pity that such a rule had to be made, for in a large school there ought to be spirit and loyalty enough among the fellows to do away with the necessity of such a regulation.

Greatly to our disappointment we could not arrange to get the High School out here for a match and after challenging various other teams we gave it up; so there will be no match out here this year. However the team go to Montreal on the 25th and they are to play the High School, perhaps Abington. The team will be as follows:

Back Wilkinson, Halves Adams, Telfer, Fraser-Campbell, Quarter Hale, Scrimmage Sykes, Gilmour 11 Irwin 1, Wings Beckett, Bonelli, Wright, Scougall, Carruthers, Spafford, Johnston 11, Spares Porteous, Peck 1, Gardiner 1.

Wilkinson, at back, plays a very good game but does too much running and not enough kicking.

Adams plays the same good game that he played last year at half, especially in tackling and running.

Fraser-Campbell 1 would be a good half if he were about twenty pounds heavier.

Hale plays the same game as he did last year only he does not feed his halves enough.

Sykes makes a very good scrimmage man on account of his weight.

Gilmour plays an excellent game at centre scrim and heels the ball out very well.

Irwin 1 has shown up well lately only he should learn to keep his temper.

Becket plays a very fast game, following up well and tackling hard.

Wright plays a good game, only he is slow at following up.

Bonelli plays a very reliable and fast game and tackles well.

Scougall is a very good wing although rather slow at times.

A good game of football
With the High School, just as per rule.

CHORUS

Just because the football team's all right

And noble Vic is looking for a fight,
The High School will look sick
When they see Telfer and Wick
As they touch-down the ball and hold it tight.

What they are saying.

THAT we are glad to note the large number of new kids:

THAT two of them certainly are green.

THAT the prefectorial body excels itself in the administration of justice:

THAT the lower school thinks so anyway.

THAT we all miss "Grumps", and his master.

THAT noble Rye is a good driver
when his companion jumps out of the rig.

THAT football is good for the lungs.

THAT this is due to method; for football we all use special pants.

THAT the M—k—r—t's arms are well developed.

THAT he proved them so.

THAT R—s—e's shins are in a very dilapidated condition.

THAT A. Del. thinks himself a plum in the scrim.

THAT M—l has proved himself a poet.

THAT G—l—r. i. liked the top-gal-

THAT so did the M—K. R—t.

THAT in consequence of the Royal Visit, No. 7. have all been knighted.

That it was the night before.

That How—d and Ch—nk wish they belonged to the Len-noxville Golf Club this term.

That they are not the only ones.

That we are quite well thank you!
