BISHOP’S

1986
A Message from
The Editor

I will always remember the 1985-1986 academic year as “The year of obsessive thoughts” — do we have enough pictures? Is the yearbook representative of all of Bishop’s? etc.

The 1986 QUAD was what Bishop’s is all about: a team effort, and I was very fortunate to have worked with some of the finest people, and, as such, I would like to take this opportunity to thank each and everyone of you who devoted your time, creativity, and support to making the 1986 QUAD a reality.

A Message from the Principal

Jasper Nicoll, Bishop's first principal, brought with him from his alma mater, the University of Oxford, an idea of education which gave people precedence over subject matter. On this premise, "Who is your professor?" is a more important question than "What are you studying?"; and "What have you learned from your friends?" is a better test of quality of the education you have had from Bishop's than "How many hours have you spent in the library?"

We have striven to preserve this order of precedence at Bishop's. If we have succeeded, then the staff of QUAD, in compiling for you a book of faces, has provided important things you have learned at Bishop's. I thank them on your behalf; and I wish you all good luck and challenging careers.

Tales of the Spirit of Bishop's

Bishop’s University had its beginnings in 1845, the result of much planning by George Mountain, Bishop of Quebec and Lucius Doolittle, the rector of Lennoxville and Sherbrooke. The purpose of the college was “the education of the youth of this province in the principles of true religion and in the various branches of learning and sound literature”.

During the first year, the college shared a building on the main street in Lennoxville with a general store, where the present Roman Catholic Church stands. Bishop’s was isolated by today’s standards for the trip from Montreal to Sherbrooke was a sixteen hour stage coach journey. Henry Roe, a student coming to the college in 1845, had to spend a night on the floor of a Granby inn. Upon reaching Sherbrooke the next day, he was forced to walk four miles along a narrow path to Lennoxville, burdened by all his luggage.

The college at that time consisted of a students’ common room, a large room doubling as a chapel and a dining hall, a kitchen and sleeping quarters. The first college building was erected in 1846 and in October of that year, the students and faculty moved to their new home. At the same time, a low open bridge was built across the river replacing the old fording place and in 1848, the principal’s residence, the Old Lodge, was built. The entrance requirements have changed greatly since the beginning when a good grounding in Greek and Latin was the main requirement. The course of study at the time consisted of languages, history, philosophy and a bit of mathematics and chemistry. There was no faculty of science as such until 1925.

For years Jasper Nicolls and Bishop Mountain had been trying to obtain a charter for the university from the Queen, appealing through such men as Lord Elgin. Finally in 1853, Queen Victoria granted Bishop’s a royal charter, and its name became the University of Bishop’s College.

Since Bishop’s began in 1845, it has had more than its share of destruction by fires, not to mention what the students have done all by themselves. The first was 1847 when the chapel and the building which housed Bishop’s College School caught fire. Because the only fire fighting equipment was a hand pump, a bucket line was set up to the river; but this was not sufficient and both buildings were destroyed. In 1875 a fire in the College quarters was not discovered until it was too late to save the building. 1891 brought the most disastrous fire of all.
When smoke was discovered in the servants' quarters above the school building, the students rushed to save their belongings, while members of the University and villagers fought to save the building and the new Bishop Williams' Hall. The Sherbrooke fire brigade sensibly realized that Bishop's College School could not be saved and so turned their efforts to saving the University. This was more successful and the Arts Building was saved even though the chapel roof fell in.

There was a fire again in the chapel in 1962 although this time smoke and water accounted for most of the damage.

Bishop's University has always prided itself on its close student-faculty relationship, however in 1890 a serious breach occurred between the principal and the student body. A group of Divinity students had protested living conditions in the university and otherwise had caused quite a disturbance which the principal said was a "stigma on the escutcheon of the University". The ring-leaders were rusticated for a term, but the unpleasant feeling stirred up, caused one of the members of the Corporation to resign because of the principal's handling of the situation.

Another memorable incident at Bishop's occurred in the old faculty common room, formally known as the Oak Room. In it was a fireplace which at one time caused some of the professors much embarrassment. One day, a fire was lit in it and much to the professors' surprise the room immediately filled with smoke. It was not until after the smoke had disappeared, that it was discovered that the fireplace had no chimney but existed merely to add to the atmosphere.

Female students were not admitted to the University until 1903. Several male students resented this but the University held firm. The Calendar made mention of the women by saying that they would be permitted to lectures although they had to enter by the back entrance. Women attending Bishop's caused some embarrassing events. One woman graduate remembers the time when wandering through the corridors one day, she ran into a football player coming out of the shower. They both ran in opposite directions. Women gradually assumed a more prominent position in the University, and in 1929 they helped form the honour guard for Lord Willingdon at Convocation. As the students were reciting "Long live the Ambassador" in Latin, the Governor General commented on the improved look for the female guard.

Residence life for students is much more lax today than it has been in the past. If boys were leaving the residence in the evening, they had to sign out and be back by ten-thirty. In order to enforce regulations, all the professor on duty had to do was to sit by his window at night and catch the offenders as they attempted to sneak up the fire escape.

Pranks there have always been. One student in the eighties used to dress up as the Devil and enter other students' rooms at night carrying a dish of burning sulphur. The students of the Thirties were an especially exuberant lot. One time, the ancient History class showed up for their lecture in white "toggles" borrowed from beds. At this time it was the custom to shave off Porter Dewhurst's mustache whenever Bishop's beat Loyola in Hockey.

Despite many set-backs along the way, Bishop's has grown steadily in size and reputation since the original ten students started their studies in 1845. The contribution of Bishop's graduates to Canadian society will be as great in the future as they have been in the past if Bishop's continues to adapt itself to a changing society.

TO ALL UNDERGRADUATES

A note from the principal
& S.R.C. president

On this coming Saturday, October 5th, 1985, the Gaiteers will be hosts to the Queen's Golden Gaels. The Queen's contingent will be accompanied by their marching pipe and brass band. The marshals will keep the field clear at half-time so that the band may perform; and we count on you to applaud them as they deserve.

During the game, the Queen's supporters will of course be reinforced by their band; but if we can have some organized cheerleading, we should surely be able to make more noise than they do. Let's give the team the support it deserves!

MARCHING SONG

Drink a toast to Bishop's University
On the mighty Massawippi shore
We're conditioned to our fate
We'll never graduate
We'll stay here for ever more.

College days will linger ever in our hearts
Wearing gowns, raising hell and guaffing ale and we'll show esprit de corps
as we watch the Gaiters roar on to victory.

So raise your beer mugs
and your little brown jugs
to Bishop's University.

Alan W. Jones was born in London and received his early education there; he later took his B.A. at Sheffield, his M. Ed. at Durham and a certificate in theology at the University of London. After doing military service in the Education Corps, he worked as a high school teacher and principal in Nigeria and Sierra Leone. In 1969, he immigrated to Canada to assume a position in the Graduate School of Education at Bishop’s University. In 1973 Alan became Chairperson of the school, a post he held until his death. In this capacity, he was a member of the Canadian and Quebec associations of Deans of education. From 1971-77, he served on the Protestant Committee of the Superior Council of Education of Quebec. In 1979, the substance of his Master’s research was published under the title, Lyulph Stanley: A Study in Educational Politics. In addition to work on nineteenth century English education, he conducted research on, and gave his support to, Protestant Anglophone education in Quebec. In his years at Bishop’s, Alan also served as Warden of St. Mark’s Chapel and was recognized as a man who upheld a quiet Christian witness in his life and work. Along with all these facets of his work at Bishop’s, there were other major foci in Alan’s life: namely, his home in Huntingville with his wife, Kathy, and his two daughters, Philippa and Audrey; family in England; a love for the special and the unusual in the world of geography and history; and an enduring, intense interest in trains!

During his sixteen years at Bishop’s, Alan Jones became known as an educator par excellence. In the graduate level teacher training programme, for which he assumed most of the responsibility, he offered a rigorous blend of theoretical and practical work that produced graduates who were ably prepared for life in the Anglophone schools of rural Quebec. In the Master’s programmes, he exacted standards of excellence and intellectual integrity while continuing to uphold the dual concerns of theory and practice.

At the time of his death, Alan had hoped to pass on a message to the Bishop’s community, but the swift progression of his illness did not permit him to prepare more than a few lines. He wrote: “There is no plaque or other memorial which will become dated with time which I envisage. If you wish to build a memorial, teach well.” These are inspiring words to anyone in education.
Hey pal,
Thanks a million for letting me crash at your place Monday night. It sure was great. I was very uncomfortable and another reason to party. It was so frightening being evacuated from my place... I still don't know why we were evacuated, it could've been the coming of Ice Age II. Ron wanted peace and quiet for his little guy or what. Thank God we got to Bank of Bolios in time and hit that Royal Flush at the Wood didn't get too panicked. Anyways buddy, I feel grateful for your hospitality bigtime hungover like a major refugee and thanks a million tons for nothing really.

Sincerely, your refugee friend __________________________ (sign here)
P.S. (I left my socks bra papers toothbrush at your place, find 'em SVP).
TO ALL 1986 GRADUATES ENTERING THE WORK FORCE:

If you're one of those people who are often tired or who feel run down, it's a good idea to remember the writings of British writer Bernard Shaw, who said: "There are 365 days in a year which are 24 hours long.
Twelve of these hours are dedicated to the night, which makes a total of 182 days. So in all, there are only 183 days left; less 52 Sundays, makes 131 days, less 52 Satudays equal 79 left for work; but there are four hours daily dedicated to eating, which added, total 60 days, this means that there 19 days dedicated to work. But since eve-everyone enjoys 15 days of vacations, there are only 4 days of work left, less 3 days allowed to you for sickness leaves you with only 1 day of work, but that day is precisely called "Labor Day" which is given to you as a holiday."

So... why are you tired?
