Message from the President

With correct e-mail addresses for over 60% of our alumni, Bishop’s is surely a leader among Canadian universities in e-communications. This certainly proves that our graduates do want to stay in touch with their alma mater!

The Alumni & Development Office is increasingly relying on e-mail to communicate with graduates. The vast majority of invitations for alumni events are done through e-mail. Some of you may have received an Annual Campaign solicitation by e-mail over the past year, including a wonderful one-minute piece called “Do you remember…”. A number of you are reading this message electronically, as you have indicated that is how you wish to read the Bishop’s University News.

There are many benefits to using electronic communication. Greatly reduced postage and printing costs. Better for the environment. Instantaneous and great for keeping in touch with your alma mater.

Work was completed in August on a new way to communicate more effectively with our graduates and friends around the world. We can now produce high quality HTML and text-based newsletters to keep you on top of what is happening on campus.

A Principal’s e-newsletter will be sent regularly on campus to faculty and staff. Members of The Gaiter Club will receive periodic e-newsletters from Athletics to keep them abreast of Gaiter successes. A Benefactor e-newsletter will ensure that Bishop’s Annual Campaign donors are kept up to date on Bishop’s news and events. Finally, an alumni and friends “e-invite” will invite you to events in your area.

These publications are not designed to replace the magazine you are holding. We hope the tools will help keep graduates and friends better connected to Bishop’s.

I encourage you to visit the Bishop’s website at www.ubishops.ca/alumni. In the top right corner, click on E-mail Directory to update your e-mail address and other personal information. Then keep your eye on your inbox for future e-newsletters/e-invites.

Ron Kaulbach ’66
2004 Alumnus of the Year

Ron Kaulbach’s commitment to gaining a liberal education at Bishop’s is reflected not only in his chosen disciplines — Humanities and Business — but in his extracurricular activities. His interests were many and varied: he played hockey, football and squash, participated in the Carnival Committee, Review ’64 and ’65 and in the student production of Twelfth Night, served in the History, Business, Culture and Panthesim Clubs and helped publish the Quad.

Ron’s enthusiastic service to his alma mater continues 39 years later. Ron was a member of the Corporation of Bishop’s University from 1982-91, and has served on the Pension Committee for full-time employees for over 10 years, offering his time, expertise and advice. Ron was a volunteer for our Partners in Learning Capital Campaign (1998-2002), serving as Chair, Major Gifts for Montreal, and helped establish the Athletic Endowment Fund during our Sesquicentennial celebration.

Ron not only encourages others to make gifts to Bishop’s, he has generously supported the University for many years. In 1998, he endowed the Ron and Shelly Kaulbach Awards, three awards given annually to students who have demonstrated good performance in a sport and are in financial need. He continues to be available when Bishop’s needs him, and welcomed alumni and friends to his Racket Club to honour our 2000 Alumnus of the Year, Norman Webster ’62, DCL ’85.

Ron is Managing Partner for Gryphon Investment Counsel Inc. in Montreal. He and his wife, Shelly, have two children, Heidi and Nicholas.

Bishop’s University is pleased to name Ron Kaulbach our 2004 Alumnus of the Year.

Rob Allatt ’93       Dan Bohinc ’94
Sterling Mawhinney ’88
University Service Awards

Rob Allatt ’93 and Dan Bohinc ’94 are a dynamic duo who, as Co-Presidents of the Montreal Alumni Branch, have used their enthusiasm, creativity and hard work in the service of the Alumni Association. Montreal is one of Bishop’s largest alumni branches, and Rob and Dan have organized many events to allow Montreal alumni the opportunity to meet, discuss their common interests, and promote Bishop’s. Their efforts to appeal to a variety of ages and interests are impressive. From pub nights, to family skating events, to barbecues, to pre-game warm ups for the Gaiters to business luncheons, Rob and Dan organize and attend numerous events on behalf of Bishop’s every year. In 2000, they began organizing the Bishop’s float for the St. Patrick’s Day parade in Montreal — an annual event that attracts thousands — and the float has won an award three times in the past five years. They have served on the National Committee of the Alumni Association and offered their advice and expertise on many issues.

As an undergraduate at Bishop’s, Sterling Mawhinney ’88 set a pattern as a volunteer that continued when he became an alumnus. On his graduation he received a Golden Mitre award for his work on the SRC, the Mitre, in varsity soccer and basketball, as a DJ for CJMQ and the pub. Since then, he has served as Co-president of the Montreal Branch, is a long-serving Member-at-large on the National Committee of the Alumni Association, has organized Montreal Branch theatre nights, and returned to campus as a panelist for career day, not to mention the many Montreal events he has attended and often lent a helping hand.

TO NOMINATE CANDIDATES FOR OUR ALUMNI AWARDS, SEE PAGE 11.
When I became Principal last July, I said that I would take a year to listen closely to members of Bishop’s different constituencies before I would establish priorities. After an interesting and challenging year, I have identified four areas of interest. They are not rigid, nor are they radical, but they are all important to the future of our University.

Governance is a prominent topic on our campus, as it is at most universities and in boardrooms across the country. There is, however, confusion about what it means. Governance embodies social architecture. I use the analogy of a ship when explaining governance. Who is the most influential person on a ship? The captain, the chief engineer or the cook? The answer is none of the above. The most influential person is the naval architect. Everyone on the ship acts within the parameters set by the naval architect, who decides in advance the type of ship they are working on and how it will navigate.

Governance is also about looking to the future. Educators today must play the role of naval architect who will design the ship that will carry our children through the 21st century. To do this, we need be clear about our mission, and decide how best to accomplish that mission. The process requires collegiality and compromise, just as every institution is the result of compromises among its constituents. We will revisit and reestablish — or perhaps simply reaffirm — how we will coordinate our resources in order to fulfil our mission.

The issue of finance continues to affect higher education across Canada. At Bishop’s, expenses exceed revenues. I call this a structural deficit. We are not running a deficit because people on campus are spending more than they should. We have a structural deficit because our traditional revenue base (tuition, government transfers and ancillary enterprise profits) does not allow us to meet our mounting contractual obligations.

The situation is compounded by the fact that Quebec universities have, for years, been underfunded by $375 million a year. Bishop’s represents 1% of the higher education budget in Quebec, so year after year we face a shortage of $3.75 million. In fact, the MEQ (Ministère de l’Éducation du Québec) has agreed that this amount represents a valid estimate of Quebec’s annual shortfall of funding to higher education.

Universities — and everyone who believes in the importance of higher education — must lobby the government and make the public aware that we cannot sustain this chronic underfunding.

We cannot, however, believe additional government funding will solve all our financial issues. We need to explore opportunities for revenue generation and revenue diversification, while being mindful of the importance of maintaining academic standards at Bishop’s. Some areas to consider are the privatization of international student fees, diversification of ancillary enterprises and growth of language training programmes and summer camps.

To be successful in the future, Bishop’s must ensure that we provide students with a value added learning experience. Students have become more discriminating “consumers.” They are not looking only for learning content, they are looking for learning context. They are not looking only for academic learning, they are looking for experiences that complement their time in the classroom. We will build on the past hallmarks of the “Bishop’s Experience” to ensure that all students engage in a high level of extracurricular activities to complement their classroom education.

Our relationship with the wider community is an important issue, together with the role Bishop’s plays in the social and economic health of our community: regionally, nationally and globally.

What will Bishop’s do to contribute to the sustainable development and prosperity of our region? We have much to offer, not only to the economic prosperity of our community, but to its cultural and intellectual prosperity. What will our role be in developing Lennoxville into a vibrant university town, and in establishing Sherbrooke as the “cité universitaire” in Quebec and Canada? Now, more than ever, we must think beyond the arches of the Quad.

These four areas will help shape Bishop’s priorities and strategic plan for the coming years. There is no doubt in anyone’s mind that we excel at providing an undergraduate education. Our strategic plan, therefore, will not call for radical change. But we must be clear, thoughtful and outspoken about our vision and about the importance of our mission.
Chris Lesanko Rehabilitation Fund

On March 24, 2005, Chris Lesanko, a Bishop’s student and a skilled lacrosse player, suffered a serious neck injury at his home in Lennoxville. Chris displaced the fourth vertebrae in his neck from an unfortunate accident, causing him to lose sensation and movement in most of his body below his chest. He was rushed to the CHUS in Sherbrooke and later underwent surgery. His family transported him back to Saskatchewan where he is recovering at the Wascana Rehabilitation Centre in Regina.

Chris Lesanko was raised in the small lacrosse hotbed community of Sturgis, Saskatchewan, the youngest of three brothers who grew up playing lacrosse. Chris started playing competitively at age 11 and was a member of many provincial championship teams in Sturgis.

Chris is a great leader and does not shy away from the physical play in field and box lacrosse despite his small stature (5’7”, 150+ pounds). He is respected for his hard work, determination, speed, agility and excellent stick skills. He has received many awards, including the 2000 Russell Slobodian (Athlete of the Year) Award of the Saskatchewan Lacrosse Association, and in 2004 Most Valuable Player in the Prairie Gold Lacrosse League.

Chris enrolled at Bishop’s in 2003 and continued to excel at lacrosse. In 2003-04 he was named OUFLA All-Star Attackman and B.U. Men’s Lacrosse Rookie of the Year. In 2004-05 he was named CUFLA All-Star Attackman, CUFLA 2nd in scoring (42 points in 8 games), and B.U. Men’s Lacrosse MVP of the Year. In April he was named Bishop’s Men’s Athlete of the Year, the first time a lacrosse player has won the prestigious award. (The voting for the award was completed before Chris was injured.)

Chris Lesanko Rehabilitation Fund

The Lesanko family has already incurred significant expenses which are not reimbursed by the Saskatchewan or Quebec health care systems, and there will be many other costs as Chris undergoes rehabilitation. We hope that by raising funds for Chris, we will ensure he receives the best medical treatment available to help him make a full recovery.

If you wish to help Chris, please send your contribution in the form of a cheque to:

Study in comfort in Bishop’s transformed Periodicals Room

The current Periodical Room in the Library was renovated this summer to provide a comfortable and relaxed place for users to read journals and newspapers. The atmosphere is quiet, calm and inviting. The study carrels are gone, and the room is now furnished with large armchairs and couches as well as ottomans, coffee tables, plants and soft lighting. There are tables for group study, and the Library will be signing out wireless computers which link to the University network for use in the room.

Library patrons are encouraged to use the room for the perusal of journals or as a pleasant place to take a break from studying. There is a magazine exchange as well as a paperback book rack to provide the students with light reading material. So far the library users are reacting positively.

Discovering yourself through Art Therapy
Two graduates find their vocation helping people through art

Pursuing my Creative Passion

My passion is using art therapy to facilitate personal and professional development. This passion has grown from my past experience in business and my desire to offer people creative expression. I completed a BA in Fine Arts in 1991 at Bishop’s, thinking of a career in graphic design or architecture. On graduation, I worked as a litigation paralegal for over two years.

Yearning for creativity in my life again, I left law and took a position as a creative assistant in a small advertising agency. After one year I determined that this position did not allow me enough creative freedom, so I decided to travel the Southwest Pacific for 14 months. When I returned, I took a position as a Western Canada sales manager for a representative firm in the high tech industry. Once again I found myself searching for a way to integrate creativity into my life. Three years in this position helped me to clarify my interest and passion for relationships with people, but the job was missing art.

When I learned about art therapy, I was inspired by the idea of integrating business and creative expression. This was my vision when I enrolled at the Vancouver Art Therapy Institute in 1999. After graduation in 2001, I focused my entrepreneurial energy on building a business, launched my company, “Insight Through Images Consulting” and built my dream job.

At my studio in historical Gastown in Vancouver, I offer support and inspiration to a range of populations, including organizations and corporations who wish to team build or encourage emotional intelligence development in their employees, and underprivileged youth or adults with drug, trauma or sexual abuse issues.

To illustrate how I apply art therapy, the following is a case study from my thesis, “Insight Through Images: Art, Emotional Intelligence and Professional Development.” I asked the following questions: Does art assist people to visually witness their emotions and does art help them to relate to and enhance their emotional intelligence? How does art therapy, or the making of spontaneous art, affect people in their professional lives?

Research was gathered from six participants in a six-week creative process group for business people seeking to learn about emotional intelligence through art. The group met for two hours for consecutive weekday evenings. The purposes: 1. to explore the use of art as a tool to experience, identify and understand emotions and 2. to educate participants about the significance of emotional intelligence in their personal and professional lives.

Richard, a single male, mid 30s worked in the high tech industry and had no previous experience with therapy or counselling. Very strict and perfectionist parents raised him and siblings.

The above image is Richard’s response to the art directive “Illustrate a time when you did not get something you wanted, either you stopped yourself, or someone or something stopped you. What did that look like?” From the selection of pre-cut words and captions, Richard chose words describing emotions that he later explained were those he experienced in life. The words included were: “limit, afraid, angry, disgust, frustrated, embarrassed, hurt, surprise, enraged, anxiety and fear.” While processing this image he said that “he knew this feeling very well,” and when addressing the large hand in the centre of the page, he stood up with his hand held out front and said “denied.” The brick wall covered in the words he identified, along with the stop sign and large hand, suggest that Richard has allowed himself to be stopped by his own emotions. However, he stated that “life is a series of emotions [which he can] feel and not be afraid.”

In this piece he identified that he no longer wanted to restrict himself or be restricted by his own emotions. This image signifies his desire to change this for himself.

However, Richard also indicated that there are emotions he has not yet discovered or experienced, indicated by the black which he refers to as “dark below” and his reference to “new ones [emotions that] I’m worried about.” Perhaps his acknowledgement of undiscovered emotions signifies the fear that underlies his internal restrictions.

When given the opportunity to illustrate being “unstoppable” (second image in same session), Richard created the mandala to the right. He described his art as an angelic white dove in the centre of the page representing “peace, radiance and brightness.” The image demonstrates his ability to connect with a feeling and energy beyond the limitations that he places on himself. He was able to understand these emotions cognitively and spiritually.

Over six weeks Richard used the art to explore issues he was sorting out in his life. During the informational interview a few weeks following the sessions, Richard shared many insights he gained from the experience.

The use of art making and the insights gained from a created image is an inspiring and thought-provoking experience affecting individuals in profound ways. My desire to offer tools for creative expression to assist individuals to learn more about themselves continues to be my passion.

Art Therapy (cont’d)

Girls Group

The Art Therapy programme at The University of Western Ontario was the perfect combination of my Psychology Degree and my minor in Fine Arts from Bishop’s University. Using art in a counselling setting helps break down the barriers between group members and facilitators. Often the process of creating can be therapeutic. Art Therapy can aid in communication, as children often find it difficult to find the words to describe their feelings and events in their lives.

My work in a family support and crisis centre has allowed me to use art therapy to address a variety of issues including separation and divorce, anger, social skills and self esteem.

In the process of my work in these areas I began noticing that many of the girls that we saw were struggling with issues beyond their years — social relationships, cultural issues, drugs and alcohol. It became evident that when girls were in a single gender group their comfort level in discussing these issues increased. This also opened up the door to explore new topics that arose frequently with young girls.

Girls appeared to be receiving many mixed messages from the massive amount of media that they were exposed to and the people in their daily lives. By the time girls were ten years old, many had already formed opinions and ideas about themselves and started to put up barriers when talking with adults. Art Therapy is a wonderful way to grab their attention, get them interested in learning and sharing, and open up their creativity to build confidence.

The group began at White Oaks Public School and was simply called “Girls Group.” It was created to support pre-adolescent girls ages 10-12 that were struggling in some way emotionally, academically, socially, or in relation to family issues.

Concepts such as self image, values, the depiction of girls through the media and relationship patterns are all explored. The main rule that the members agree on is strict confidentiality, allowing the girls a safe place to express their feelings thoughts and ideas with other girls.

A variety of art techniques are used to help facilitate discussion and help the girls explore and process information that is shared in the group. In the process of creating art, the group members become more relaxed and open, providing opportunities to build on the strengths of some young girls that may not thrive in academic settings. Everything that is created in the group is kept by the girls. There are no strict directives given and nothing is graded or judged. Art and personal information are only shared by the girls if they choose.

Each session begins with the girls working in their journals drawing or writing about their week. During a short “check in,” the girls talk about how the week went and share any stories they wish with the other girls.

The needs of the girls help guide the sessions and each topic is tailored to the dynamics of the group. Many of the girls come from different cultures and backgrounds. Sometimes the group is the first place that they have shared stories about their families’ struggles or their past life in different countries. Many come from homes where family violence, drug and alcohol issues or time spent in foster care have never been shared before.

Usually by the end of the eight weeks together the girls have formed bonds with the others in the group even though they may have appeared to have nothing in common at first glance. The group helps bridge the gap to building positive instead of adversarial relationships and link girls in a supportive way.

The final project that the girls create are handmade pillows they decorate with images that are comforting to them. They take these small tokens away with them as a reminder of relationships built and a positive experience as part of a group. We hope their experience in Girls Group will give them some strengths that they can draw on in the future when they face challenges and choices.

FYI

A Virtuous Circle

Research shows that individuals who have completed college or university not only begin their working lives with higher skill levels, they also maintain those skills at a high level for many years.

In part, this is due to the fact that they tend to be employed in occupations that demand the use of strong literacy, numeracy, document and problem-solving skills. Employers tend to focus their training efforts on these individuals.

Furthermore, individuals with advanced education also tend to engage in learning activities on their own. The end result is that, through life experiences, the most highly skilled individuals tend to be the ones who have access to further opportunities to add to their skills – what, in effect, becomes a virtuous circle.

The 2005 Gaiter Classic organizing committee was somewhat concerned before the start of this year’s Classic — a record 180 participants had registered for the tournament. A nice dilemma you say? Their worries stemmed from the sheer number of golfers on the course. How could we ensure that 180 participants enjoy their day of golf without turning the event into a painfully long day? A day of great weather, good course management and plenty of organization prior to the event made for one of the best Classics of all time. Equally important was the fact that a record number of golfers raised a record amount — the Classic netted $22,000 (numbers still coming in), making this Gaiter Classic one of the best fund raising events the Athletic Department has held.

Branch Briefs

Fredericton

Small but fun. Fredericton has a branch of approximately 50 grads, a half dozen or so of whom turned out for cocktails and food at Boston Pizza Restaurant in May. There was a wide range in grad years of those who attended, which made for very entertaining stories — we even had to promise not to repeat some of the tales. We look forward to seeing more people at our next event. Rumours have a bowling evening at Kingswood in the works.

James Walde ’88, who recently took over from Tina Smith ’93 (many thanks Tina!), welcomes your suggestions for events in the area. James can be reached at marph@nbnet.nb.ca

Calgary

Harvest Hills Golf Course was the site of the 2005 Calgary Alumni and Friends Golf Tournament held on May 29. The 25 grads who participated all played their own ball and enjoyed this simple but challenging course. All levels of golfers participated, and the weather cooperated to help make this a fun event. After golf, the group enjoyed dinner together and participation gifts were handed out. We hope this will become an annual event.

Next event: in the works for the fall is a possible event planned in conjunction with a Calgary Stampeders football game. Stay tuned for details.
Toronto Alumni and Friends

Golf Tournament

The 6th annual event took place at the Richmond Hill Golf Club. The weather was excellent, and the 113 participants raised close to $6,000 for the Jeff Cannon Memorial Fund, partly due to a silent auction (thank you to organizers Trevor Lovig '94, Linda & Hayley Chown) which included 40 items and collected nearly $3,000.

Thank you to the many who donated items to the auction and our course competitions. Thank you also to major sponsors Dave Colfer '90, Keith Labbett '91 and Dean French '91 and the many hole sponsors including: Derek Colfer '95, Rob Crysdales '91, Rob Gargano '88, Alastair Griffin '90, Brent Kelly '89, Craig MacAdam '98, James Maloney '89, Adam Moore '91, Peter Neal '89, Pat Sheils '89 and Gil Wong '92.

The winners of the tournament, shooting 58, were John Chippindale '82, Wayne Hussey, Mario Belanger '82 and Scott Ross.

Upcoming events:

September: Gaiter Alumni sports team start-ups

October: Mentor match launch party

Montreal

20 year Reunion

Alumni from the Classes of '84, '85, '86 gathered in Montreal at Hurley’s Irish Pub to celebrate 20 years since graduating from Bishop’s. The reception started early in the evening and apparently, for many, lasted well into the night. Alumni from Montreal, Ottawa and the Eastern Townships were invited and those who attended had a great time catching up and reliving old times.

Thank you to Pat Vaughan '85 for organizing this event.

Thetford Mines

Thank you to Aline ’56 and John ’42 Visser for hosting a Bishop’s reception for alumni and friends in their beautiful home in Thetford Mines on May 12, 2005. The food and company were second to none. Principal Poupart attended and spoke to the group about the latest news on campus.

Halifax

Thank you to Malcolm Boyle ’78 who hosted a reception for alumni, prospective students and their parents at his office reception room on May 5, 2005. The location, on the waterfront with a great view of the harbour, was ideal.

Bishop’s is particularly grateful to Malcolm, who has hosted this event a number of times. He always relishes the occasion and does a fantastic job. Several students who went to the reception will attend Bishop’s this fall. Thank you to all alumni who came and helped promote Bishop’s.

Barbados

Barbados BU Alumni vs The World Golf Tournament

A tradition continues. The Barbados Golf Club was the site of the 2nd Annual Bishop’s vs the World Golf Tournament. The event was another success, especially since we won. Thank you to Shane Johnson ’95 and Paul Alleyne ’01 for organizing this event. In total, 24 golfers participated. The golfers from the rest of the world consisted of other Canadian university graduates living in Barbados. Following the golf everyone enjoyed cocktails and dinner together. Special guests at the event included Bishop’s professors Bill Robson and Lissa McRae. What a great event!
You can make a difference by giving to Bishop’s University

You choose how you want to make a difference. Here are some examples of how you can help Bishop’s meet its priorities:

- Give to a scholarship or bursary
- Contribute to a specific department
- Donate to our Library
- Invest in technology
- Add to academic enrichment (faculty research, student projects, guest speakers)
- Give to athletics
- Support culture (theatre, music, art)

For a donor:

I am flattered that Bishop’s wants my thoughts on why I support the University.

I think alumni need to know that what is important is not how much people give, but that they participate and give something, and that giving to Bishop’s feels great.

I know I am not the only graduate who has thought, “the University doesn’t really need my contribution.” In speaking with my friend and Bishop’s Advancement Officer David McBride ’93, however, I learned how crucial every dollar coming from alumni is. The money is allocated to important programmes that allow students to receive the same excellent education we did. Every dollar is used in a productive way.

As graduates, we know that the lessons we learn at Bishop’s are with us for a lifetime. But we all know people who had to leave the University for economic reasons. I believe we should do everything we can to help those who need financial support to complete their degrees. It’s amazing what BU grads are doing in the world, and I am tremendously thankful to be able to help produce more of them.

Giving to Bishop’s will give you a feeling of abundance, satisfaction and accomplishment you may find surprising.

Roger Hardy ’93

(Roger has generously established the Roger V. Hardy Bursary for Rugby student-athletes in financial need.)

For a student:

When choosing Bishop’s, receiving the scholarships helped me confirm that I was making the right decision. They made me realize that Bishop’s is a school where I am truly wanted. It also showed me that the University and the donors of the scholarship programme strongly supported my goal to excel at Bishop’s.

Within the first few weeks here, having these scholarships and the requirements needed to keep them brought my attention to the high standards of academics at the University and set me on a path of academic excellence that has been a motivating factor for me throughout the last four years. Receiving the letter of renewal each year gives me a sense of pride and accomplishment.

For providing me with motivation, recognition and a source of financial stability for the last four years, I thank you and I would like to strongly encourage you to continue to invest in the Bishop’s University scholarship programme.

Faculty Profile

The William and Nancy Turner Teaching Award is unlike other awards that recognize excellence in teaching at Bishop’s because students both nominate candidates and select the recipient. This year they have chosen Professor George Rideout.

In their essays nominating Professor Rideout, it is clear that students want to celebrate their trust in his knowledge of the early stage, of Shakespeare, and also to acknowledge George’s reputation as a playwright.

His classroom is a dynamic space that binds words to practice as the lecture podium transforms into a stage, where desks are not simply rearranged but are stacked, forming structures that support students’ explorations of character. His classes are not all talk as unverbalized action plays its role in making knowledge more fundamental, a knowledge that rubs off on others and changes relationships.

George gives back to the community. He spends endless hours preparing plays that we all enjoy. He takes special care of those students who work well into the wee hours as the play approaches opening night. This care extends beyond sharing insights: it means feeding them, listening to them and comforting them when they are exhausted.

The students who have nominated him want to celebrate his generosity as a teacher, as a director and as a person they call George.

Dale Stout, Professor
Department of Psychology

Two long-serving faculty retire

Dr. Stephen L. Black

Stephen Black joined the Department of Psychology in 1973, his major assignments being to teach physiological psychology and set up an animal laboratory. Despite having an allergy to rats (!), he was well equipped to do so, because he obtained a B.Sc. degree in natural sciences at McGill University, M.A., and Ph.D. degrees in physiological psychology at McMaster University, and then completed two years of post doctoral research at The University of Western Ontario. Our physiological offerings flourished under Steve’s guidance and, with his support and encouragement, were developed into our present neuroscience concentration.

Steve built up the developmental psychology side of our programme by offering courses in child psychology. Over the years, they have proved very popular with students from many disciplines in the University. In addition, and reflecting his belief that psychology is the scientific study of behaviour and its external and internal determinants, Steve introduced a course in behaviour modification. Here, students learned how experimentally-established principles of conditioning can be applied to change what people do. His belief in objective observation and measurement is also reflected in his legendary multiple-choice examinations to test student knowledge.

Steve believes that a professor should profess, and his classes were always an interesting blend of fact and opinion. Moreover, he kept students’ interest by sprinkling his lectures with movies and power point presentations, which not only contained bullets but also relevant eye-catching illustrations and, rumour has it, appropriate noises. Students found Steve to be a demanding professor, but they have also recognized his success in communicating scientific information in an entertaining manner. His quirky sense of humour lent the desired touch.

You can also see this humour in some of his 25 peer-reviewed publications, which have catchy titles such as “Regarding Pooh” and “Pavlov’s dogs: For whom the bell rarely tolled.” His broad interests are illustrated by the variety of topics on which he has written in journals and on the on-line discussion group “Teaching in the Psychological Sciences” (TIPS): thumping behavior in rabbits, drinking in rats, aggression and odour conditioning in humans, holy water and plant growth, music and intelligence, and whether you should drink eight glasses of water a day.

Steve remains a scientist both in and out of the classroom or lab, bringing his meticulous approach to all his University duties and committees — some 30 in total. He organized the Faclist computer discussion group, and served on committees such as faculty evaluation and appeals, Senate, library, animal care and the executive of the Association of Professors of Bishop’s University.

Perhaps Steve’s most lasting contribution has been his concern over plagiarism. This problem is not without controversy, but Steve has never shied away from controversy. He served on a Senate committee on plagiarism, and was the instigator of our departmental handout on academic honesty. In the department, he has been a diligent chairperson and secretary, the driving force behind our web page, and has looked after our library orders for 31 years. To his eternal credit, Steve never let his personal interests dominate his choice of books.

On behalf of the students that he has taught, his colleagues in the department and the University as a whole, I would like to thank Steve for his dedicated work and for keeping us challenged over 32 years. We wish Steve and his wife Helen a happy and healthy retirement.

Stuart McKelvie, Professor
Department of Psychology

Dr. Curt Rose

P rofessor Courtice G. Rose is retiring after thirty-four years of service to the university. Curt, as he is known in the community, came to Bishop’s in 1971 as a Lecturer in the Department of Geography after completing his M.A. at Western. In 1975, Curt took a leave of absence to do his Ph.D. at Clark University in Worcester, Mass. In 1976, he received a second M.A. from Clark, obtaining his Ph.D in 1978, after which he returned to Bishop’s.

Curt was the paradigmatic professor for Bishop’s University. Over his thirty-four years, he taught a wide range of courses at the first, second, and third year levels, including the Philosophy of Geography, the History of Geographic Thought, and the Philosophy of the Social Sciences…which were his main areas of specialization.

As a researcher, Curt has published seventeen articles and given a dozen papers to various conferences. He has acted as the Editor of Newsletter, the publication of the New England-St. Lawrence Valley Geographical Society. He has also been an Editor of Studies in History and Politics. Four different times he was a member of the Executive Committee of the New England Division of the American Association of Geographers.

His administrative contributions to the University are truly outstanding and, indeed, amazing. From the sublime — Dean of Social Sciences between 1991 and 1996 — to the ridiculous (but necessary!) — Chairman, Special Committee on Vehicular Access, Parking and Campus Parking. Curt has been at some point a member of all the standing (and many ad hoc) committees of the University (of which at last count numbered around sixty!), including the Senate and the Executive Committee of Corporation. In 1987-1988, he was the Vice-President of the Association of Professors of Bishop’s University (A.P.B.U.) and from 2000 until 2005, he held the important position of University Ombudsman.

At four different times, Curt was a Visiting Professor to the Graduate School of Geography at Clark University. In 1998-1999, he was a Visiting Scholar in the prestigious Boston University Marine Program at Wood’s Hole, Mass. where he studied Oceanography; but more importantly for Bishop’s, his experience there brought him to the conviction that the Geography Department at Bishop’s had to become involved in Environmental Studies. On his return, Curt began to work toward that end. In 2001, he finally succeeded in changing the department to the Department of Environmental Studies and Geography. The number of Honours and Major students rose from thirty-four to ninety-one over the next few years.

Apart from his academic career, Curt’s main recreational activity was and still is sailing. An avid sailor both recreationally and competitively, his first act as a retired person was to go off this past summer to compete in the Marblehead-Halifax yacht race.

Curt will be missed by the University for his outstanding contributions to it as well as his generous and warm fellowship. He will be missed mostly, I think, by those who never knew him: the students who are yet to come for whom he would have worked tirelessly in the future just as he worked for those in the past. We have all benefitted greatly from knowing him.

Michael Pick Drama Fund

When Scott Griffin ’60, DCL ’02 became Chancellor, he was determined to become involved in the lives of students. He has pledged to sponsor each fall a workshop for senior drama students with established Canadian actors and actresses who will provide experience and advice to students. This fall, for instance, renowned Canadian actress Fiona Reid will spend time on campus.

When an alumnus and good friend of Scott’s read of this commitment in the last issue of Bishop’s University News, he sent a gift in honour of their friendship and to mark the occasion of Scott becoming the 18th Chancellor of Bishop’s University. This anonymous donor also made the gift in memory of Michael Pick ’60, an athletic thespian at Bishop’s who died prematurely in 1987. The Michael Pick Drama Fund will generate revenue annually for the Drama Department to fund enriching activities and opportunities for the students.

David Smith

It is with sadness that we observe the passing of Dr. David D. Smith on June 20, 2005, 45 years after he was lured away from McGill by Principal A. R. Jewitt to establish the Department of Psychology at Bishop’s. David arrived with a B.A. (Sir George Williams, 1949), an M.A. (Minnesota, 1950), a Ph.D. (McGill, 1957), and work experience at both Montreal universities and Canadian National Railways. From 1960 to 1963, he singlehandedly taught all seven courses ranging from experimental to industrial psychology — a truly remarkable feat — and he saw the first psychology honours student graduate in 1962.

During the 1960s, as the faculty complement grew to five and student numbers rapidly increased to yield one of the largest departments on campus, he guided the development of the programme, and supervised the building of human and animal laboratories. Dave served continuously as department Chair until 1974, after which the position rotated among other faculty members. When he retired in 1987, 319 students had graduated with psychology degrees, a testament to the success of his vision of the psychology programme. They left with the image of a formally-dressed and erudite speaker who set high standards for all, including himself. But if a student voiced an idea that caught his fancy, he might express his delight by dancing the Dave Smith shuffle, followed by a bow.

Dave’s contributions to the academic community extended beyond the department itself. He wrote a number of academic papers and authored a widely-regarded book, Mammalian Learning and Behavior, in which he proposed a formal model of learning firmly grounded in neuroscientific principles and computer modelling. This theme followed him into retirement, with a series of papers on the role of indeterminancy of brain function in personality and creativity. During his sabbatical year in 1978-79, Dave obtained a Bishop’s B.A. degree in Fine Arts, and in his retirement he took up serious painting, donating two works which are displayed in a psychology classroom.

Dave also served effectively in many positions of leadership: Acting Chair of Sociology, Dean of Arts, Chairperson of the Division of Social Sciences and as a strong faculty voice on many committees, including Senate and Executive Committee. Following his own professional experience in private practice and at Sir George Williams and McGill in the 1950s, he was also the moving force behind the establishment of Student Counselling Services at Bishop’s in 1974.

As a man of action with a boundless passion for the whole world of learning, Dave Smith was an interesting person to work with. He listened, but he had clear opinions that were articulated with authority, particularly when debate seemed to drift. He was completely committed to his department and to the university as a whole, perhaps in part due to a historical connection. He was fiercely proud of a letter dated June 30, 1924, in which Principal A. H. McGreer praised the competence of his maternal grandfather, David K. Trotter, who was a lecturer to the preparatory class that year.

David was also an enthusiastic gardener, art lover, reader, conversationalist and raconteur. Most of all, he was a caring husband and father who, with his wife Norma, believed passionately in the family unit, even celebrating it in Limerick form. It is therefore fitting that he died peacefully at home in Orleans, Ontario, albeit after a difficult year. Indeed, he fought intermittent ill-health during most of his Bishop’s days. Like his forebear David Trotter, who was eulogized after his early passing in 1928, Dave faced his tribulations with “Scotch grit.”

We recognize David Smith’s unique position as a graduate, faculty member and administrator at all three anglophone universities in Quebec, and we fondly remember him as a dedicated colleague and founder of our department. In 1960, he introduced psychology as a theoretical and applied science rooted in historical thought and empirical study. In 2005, the departmental programmes in pure psychology, neuroscience and human resources bear his unmistakable imprint.
